1001 Spot Stain Removers do not contain optical brighteners, colouring additives or bleaching agents, however, cleaned spots may appear lighter if the surrounding carpet has not been cleaned to the same extent or if excess surfactant remains on the carpet surface. In such circumstances, it is advisable to thoroughly rinse the spot with water to remove traces of the surfactant or clean the entire carpet with a suitable large area cleaner to remove the built up soil and restore colour uniformity throughout the carpet.

The term 'shelf-life' is considered to be the minimum period of time for which a product stored correctly in the original and unopened container is expected to perform in line with the original manufacturing specification. This minimum period is strongly linked to the warranty period provided on components. These products are however of a robust nature and manufactured to a high calibre and as such they can continue to perform as expected for a significantly longer period. In any event, should these products be used beyond the minimum shelf-life set, WD-40 would not recommend usage greater than 5 years from date of manufacture.
